AGENDA:

Please join us for this reception event with high level officials and companies from China's main equipment producing regions near one of China's main oil fields. The Shandong Chamber of Commerce for Petroleum Equipment and its member companies along with the Mayor of DongYing City are sponsoring this event. They hope to meet with US companies to discuss procurement opportunities for operations in China, new joint venture partnerships, and other business relationships for various projects. They will talk about how U.S. businesses can operate within their region and with Chinese companies. This event will take place on an informal basis, with translators present. There will be a brief presentation to familiarize attendees with this region. In the Shandong province on China's east coast below Beijing, DongYing City is the biggest petroleum equipment manufacturing area in China. Near it lies China's second largest oil field, Shengli Oil Field, located in the Great DongYing area.

DongYing is the central city of the Yellow River Delta (one of the three major deltas in China) and the Shandong petroleum equipment industry is gathered there. To the north of DongYing lies the Jing Jin Tang economic belt which connects the southern economic zone of Shandong peninsula; this province is the important channel which connects the northeast and central plains. The mother river of the Chinese nation, the Yellow River, enters the sea here. The Shengli Oil Field and China University of Petroleum, the biggest Petroleum University in China, are both located in DongYing City and are the area's major drivers in the energy sector.
